Key Risks

An investment in the Fund carries substantial risks. The risks inherent to an investment in hedge funds are of a nature and degree not typically encountered in investments in securities of companies listed on major securities markets worldwide. There can be no assurance that the Fund's investment objective will be achieved and investment results may vary substantially over time. Investors incur the risk of losing all or part of their investment in the Fund. Prospective investors should carefully consider whether an investment in shares is suitable for them in the light of their own circumstances and financial resources (see the sections entitled "Risk Warnings and Disclosures for Investors in the Funds" and "Additional Risk Factors" of the Prospectus). The Fund will, however, endeavour to monitor risks through the selection of the Fund's investments based on a Due Diligence procedure (see the section entitled "Due Diligence Process" in the Prospectus). The information has been issued by sources believed to be reliable, although this is not guaranteed, and the information stated and opinions expressed constitute best judgement at the time of publication, and are subject to change without prior notification. Past performance does not predict future returns. The price of units or shares can go down as well as up and may be affected by changes in exchange rates. An investor may not receive back the amount invested. Such investments are illiquid, will not be listed on any exchange and should be regarded as fixed and long term. Alternative investments are intended for sophisticated and experienced investors who are willing to bear the economic risks of the investment, including the possible loss of the principal amount invested. Alternative investments may use leverage and other speculative practices which increase the risk of investment loss. Alternative investments are not required to provide period pricing or valuation information to investors. Investors can expect fees to be higher than those of mutual funds. It is essential that investors read the prospectus of the Fund and acquaint themselves with the risks associated with an investment in the Fund, including the risks of the underlying investments.

It is important to note that the capital value of, and income from, any investment may go down as well as up and you may not get back the full amount invested. When an investment is denominated in a currency other than your local or reporting currency, changes in exchange rates may have an adverse effect on the value, price or income of that investment. There is no guarantee of positive trading performance. In the case of investments for which there is no recognised market, it may be difficult for investors to sell their investments or to obtain reliable information about their value or the extent of the risk to which they are exposed. Investment in any market may be extremely volatile and subject to sudden fluctuations of varying magnitude due to a wide range of direct and indirect influences. Such characteristics can lead to considerable losses being incurred by those exposed to such markets. If the investment is withdrawn or terminated early, it may not return the full amount invested. In addition to the normal risks associated with investing, international investments may involve risk of capital loss from unfavourable fluctuations in currency values, from differences in generally accepted accounting principles or from economic or political instability in certain jurisdictions. Narrowly focused investments and smaller companies typically exhibit higher volatility.

HSBC is part of the HSBC Group. Companies within the HSBC Group and/or their officers, directors and employees may have positions in any securities mentioned in this document (or any related or underlying investment) and may from time to time add to or dispose of any such securities (or investment). Companies within the HSBC Group may act as market maker or have assumed an underwriting commitment in securities discussed in this document (or related investments), may sell them or buy them from customers on a principal or agency basis and may also perform or seek to perform investment banking or underwriting services for or relating to or have banking or other commercial relationships with the issuer of those securities or the issuer of the shares underlying those securities. HSBC and members of the HSBC Group may receive monetary and non-monetary benefits from HSBC affiliates or third parties in connection with the origination, distribution and/or sale of investment products to customers, some of which HSBC Private Banking may not be aware of, including spreads taken by another part of HSBC or HSBC Group as our counterparty.

Conflicts of interest may arise which investors and HSBC may not become aware of. Separate elements within the HSBC Group may be aware of an interest or relationship which may give rise to a conflict of interest. By receipt of this information, investors are deemed to acknowledge and accept that the HSBC Group (including HSBC) may have interests or duties which conflict with investors' interests and which would or might otherwise conflict with the duties owed by HSBC to investors. Furthermore, investors accept that HSBC's agreement to provide services to investors does not require any other member of the HSBC Group or any HSBC division to restrict its activities in any way nor to provide investors or HSBC with any information whatsoever about, or derived from, those activities nor does it create any obligation to advise investors of any conflict of interest which exists or may arise.
