Main risks

- The value of investments and any income from them can go down as well as up and you may not get back the amount originally invested.
- Investing in assets denominated in a currency other than that of the investor's own currency exposes the value of the investment to exchange rate fluctuations
- The Fund invests in bonds whose value generally falls when interest rates rise. This risk is typically greater the longer the maturity of a bond investment and the higher its credit quality. The issuers of certain bonds, could become unwilling or unable to make payments on their bonds and default. Bonds that are in default may become hard to sell or worthless.

Monthly performance commentary

Market Review

The month of May saw markets experience debt-ceiling anxiety as negative headlines through most of the month sent US Treasury yields higher. Despite the higher rates volatility, credit spreads held in and widened only modestly with Global IG at +3 bps and Global HY at +9 bps thanks to solid US data and stabilization in the US regional banking sector. This saw negative total returns for both IG and HY credit markets. IG supply picked up in May with issuance coming in at $172.8 billion for a YTD total of $786.9 billion issued while HY supply also increased with $22.6 billion issued for a YTD total of $78.3. billion.

Treasury yields rose in May, peaking just before month end before falling back. The rise was led by shorter dated bonds causing the yield curve to further invert in the front end. The 2, 5, 10 and 30 year yields moved 40, 27, 22 and 19 basis points to finish at 4.40%, 3.75%, 3.64% and 3.86% respectively.

The broad global corporate Investment Grade bond market as represented by the ICE BofA Global Corporate Index USD hedged saw spreads finish 3 bps wider in May for a total return of -0.88%. Regionally, US, EUR, UK and EM spreads moved tighter by 5, 8, 2 and -5 bps respectively. AA, A and BBB bonds all performed broadly in line over the month.

The broad global High Yield bond market as represented by the ICE BofA Global High Yield USD hedged Index saw spreads finish 9 bps wider over the month, for a total return of -0.58%. Regionally US, EUR and EM spreads moved by 16, 4 and -2 bps respectively. B rated bonds outperformed both BB and CCC rated bonds over the month.

Portfolio

Total return was negative over the month on a gross basis as investors concerns around the debt-ceiling caused US Treasuries to rise. The HY rated bonds performed in-line with IG rated bonds in the portfolio over the period.

From a sector perspective, bonds in the consumer non-cyclical, basic industry and banking sectors contributed to returns, while bonds in the financial services and real estate sectors lagged.

From a regional perspective, North America was the main contributor to returns, while Europe and Asia detracted from returns.

The fund saw a negative contribution from the IRS while the currency hedges used to hedge non USD bond positions were positive contributors to returns over the month.

As the portfolio nears maturity, proceeds from maturing bonds are reinvested in cash and cash-like instruments.

Outlook

Resolution of the US debt ceiling and relatively strong economic data saw market expectations easing somewhat with regards to the severity of a recession. Despite indicators suggesting the start of an economic slowdown, companies are still seeing solid demand however, as seen in April's strong retail sales figures. Forward guidance continues to be to the downside however. Although valuations are less than compelling we still don't see any short term catalysts that would send spreads meaningfully wider, however, longer term we still expect that spreads are more likely to move wider as we move towards a slowdown. We continue be tactical with our positioning however, taking advantage of short term opportunities when they arise.

Risk disclosures

- The Fund may invest in Emerging Markets, these markets are less established, and often more volatile, than developed markets and involve higher risks, particularly market, liquidity and currency risks.
- Derivatives may be used by the Fund, and these can behave unexpectedly. The pricing and volatility of many derivatives may diverge from strictly reflecting the pricing or volatility of their underlying reference(s), instrument or asset.
- Investment Leverage occurs when the economic exposure is greater than the amount invested, such as when derivatives are used. A Fund that employs leverage may experience greater gains and/or losses due to the amplification effect from a movement in the price of the reference source.
