Main risks

- The value of investments and any income from them can go down as well as up and you may not get back the amount originally invested.
- Investing in assets denominated in a currency other than that of the investor's own currency exposes the value of the investment to exchange rate fluctuations
- The Fund invests in bonds whose value generally falls when interest rates rise. This risk is typically greater the longer the maturity of a bond investment and the higher its credit quality. The issuers of certain bonds, could become unwilling or unable to make payments on their bonds and default. Bonds that are in default may become hard to sell or worthless.

Monthly performance commentary

Market Review

October saw a risk asset sell off while rates continued higher and market volatility increased. Investors reacted to the attack on Israel and a rise in geopolitical risk while at the same time US data had another strong showing. Corporate spreads finished wider across the board while rates saw a large jump with the US 10 Year Treasury moving from 4.56% to 4.99% mid-month. In this market environment total returns for Global Investment Grade and Global High Yield corporate bonds came in negative over the month. Supply volume fell off somewhat in October with IG issuance coming in at $102.5 billion for a YTD total of $1,316.8 billion issued while HY saw $8.9 billion issued for a YTD total of $142.8 billion.

The US Treasury curve rose and normalized further in October with long end yields rising more than the short end. The 2, 5, 10 and 30 year yields moved +4, +24, +36 and +39 basis points to finish at 5.09%, 4.85%, 4.93% and 5.09% respectively.

The broad global corporate Investment Grade bond market as represented by the ICE BofA Global Corporate Index USD hedged saw spreads finish 6 bps wider in October for a total return of -1.03%. Regionally, US, EUR, UK and EM spreads moved wider by 7, 8, 5, and 4 bps respectively. Lower rated bonds again outperformed more duration sensitive higher rated bonds over the month.

The broad global High Yield bond market as represented by the ICE BofA Global High Yield USD hedged Index saw spreads finish 38 bps wider over the month, for a total return of -0.64%. Regionally US, EUR and EM spreads moved wider by 39, 38 and 37 bps respectively. Lower rated bonds outperformed higher quality bonds over the month.

Performance

Total return was positive over the month on a gross basis despite continued rate volatility as US data continued its strong showing. The HY rated bonds underperformed IG rated bonds in the portfolio over the period.

From a sector perspective, bonds in the banking, healthcare, and financial services sectors provided the largest contribution to returns while bonds in the real estate sector lagged.

From a regional perspective, bonds in North America were the main contributor to returns, followed by Europe, while bonds in Asia lagged.

The fund saw a negative contribution from the IRS while the currency hedges used to hedge non-USD bond posted a positive contribution over the month.

As the fund near its termination date, proceeds from maturing bonds are increasingly invested into commercial paper and other short-term instruments.

Outlook

November kicked off with a sharp fall in Treasury rates. While the FOMC left rates unchanged, comments acknowledged the likely negative impact of tighter lending and credit conditions on businesses and consumers. Together with a weaker than expected jobs report, investors took this as validation of the view that the economy is perhaps slowing more substantially than previously thought, causing markets to move up their expectations on potential rate cuts. Our view is that the global economy will fall into recession, and we think its likely to occur in the first half of 2024. As a result, over the longer term we still expect that spreads are more likely to move wider as we move towards a slowdown. In the short term, while we don't see any specific catalyst that would send spreads meaningfully wider, we do recognize the increased uncertainty which could lead to some short-term volatility in both rates and credit spreads. We continue to have a defensive bias but remain tactical with our positioning, taking advantage of short-term opportunities as they arise.

Risk disclosures

- The Fund may invest in Emerging Markets, these markets are less established, and often more volatile, than developed markets and involve higher risks, particularly market, liquidity and currency risks.
- Derivatives may be used by the Fund, and these can behave unexpectedly. The pricing and volatility of many derivatives may diverge from strictly reflecting the pricing or volatility of their underlying reference(s), instrument or asset.
- Investment Leverage occurs when the economic exposure is greater than the amount invested, such as when derivatives are used. A Fund that employs leverage may experience greater gains and/or losses due to the amplification effect from a movement in the price of the reference source.
- Further information on the potential risks can be found in the Key Information Document (KID) and/or the Prospectus or Offering Memorandum.
